1 ISSUE

1.1 This is the first meeting following the consultation on the draft perverting the course of justice (PTCJ) and revised witness intimidation guidelines. This meeting will focus on responses regarding culpability factors, subsequent meetings will look at the responses regarding the rest of the draft guidelines, harm factors, sentence levels and so on.

2 RECOMMENDATION

2.1 At today's meeting the Council is asked:

- To consider the responses regarding culpability

3 CONSIDERATION

3.1 The consultation ran from 30 March to 22 June this year. In total 48 consultation responses were received, a list of respondents is attached at Annex A. The reaction to the draft guidelines was generally positive, subject to points of detail which are discussed below. Road testing of the guidelines was also carried out. A summary of the findings from this is attached at Annex B.

3.2 Starting with culpability factors for PTCJ, (Annex C) a number of respondents were concerned with the factors 'underlying offence very serious' in high culpability, and 'underlying offence was not serious' in lower culpability. The Justice Committee (JC) felt that it could be problematic: that they recognise that the seriousness of the underlying offence is an established factor for the courts to take into account, but that if the factors are to be included it would be beneficial to offer more guidance. For example, whether summary offences should be considered not serious? Without further guidance there may be unintended consequences when sentencers decide what constitutes a very serious offence, they suggest.

3.3 Professor Alisdair Gillespie from Lancaster University was also concerned with the wording of the factors and suggested that mode of trial could be used to decide seriousness.

He suggests that, as a general principle, indictable only offences should be considered the most serious, with summary offences the least serious, with either way offences falling in between the two. Failing that he suggests adding the medium culpability factor the Council considered but discounted of 'underlying offence reasonably serious'. The Justices' Clerks' Society (JCS) however felt that the wording as is in medium culpability is better than asking courts to decide whether the offence is somewhat or reasonably serious.

3.4 In devising these factors the Council had felt they were self-explanatory, but a small number of respondents felt additional guidance was needed. The Council could add the additional medium culpability factor of 'underlying offence reasonably serious' or revise the factors completely and use mode of trial instead so high culpability would be 'underlying offence an indictable only offence', medium culpability would be 'underlying offence an either way offence' and lower culpability would be 'underlying offence a summary only offence'.

3.5 However, using the mode of trial could be misleading, as it is the seriousness of the offence committed, rather than the type of offence that is important. For example, a case involving a minor street robbery (indictable only) might be less serious than a highly planned burglary (either way), but under this categorisation the robbery offence would be deemed more serious than the burglary offence. The Council has not previously assessed the seriousness of cases using mode of trial before, and it is quite an arbitrary way of assessing cases. Further, only one respondent made this suggestion so it is proposed that this idea is not practical.

Question 1: Does the Council wish to reword the underlying offence factors? If so, how would the Council wish to reword? Or just add the additional medium culpability factor?

3.6 A small number of respondents felt that there should be a culpability factor of an offender holding a position within the justice system. The absence of such a factor was also raised by some road testing participants (page 4 of Annex B.) Professor Gillespie suggested that committing the offence is more serious if the person is involved within the justice system or has an equivalent position of authority, he suggests the office holder is choosing to pervert the course of justice despite having a legal or moral obligation to facilitate justice. Similar comments were made by the Criminal Law Solicitors' Association (CLSA). Professor Gillespie goes further to suggest that where the act is linked to their job, such as a police holder deliberately changing a witness statement, this should go into high culpability, where the act is not linked, such as a Judge giving false details in a speeding offence, that should be in lower culpability.

3.7 The Council may recall that the merits of adding such a factor to step two were debated during guideline development, with the decision ultimately being not to include the factor. Given the comments made during consultation the Council may wish to revise this decision, although perhaps the subdivision of the purpose of the act into two factors suggested by Professor Gillespie is not necessary.

Question 2: Does the Council wish to add a factor of ‘Offender holds a position of responsibility within the criminal justice system’? If so, as a culpability factor or an aggravating factor?

3.8 A solicitor and Professor Gillespie felt that the proposed factors within medium culpability were too vague and asked if more could be added. As noted above Professor Gillespie suggested that there should be a factor relating to the underlying offence within medium culpability, he also suggests that ‘some planning’ is added to medium culpability. The Council may recall that during development the possibility of adding additional medium culpability factors was discussed, including ‘underlying offence reasonably serious’ and ‘conduct was somewhat sophisticated’ but it was decided against including them. However, a small number of consultees thought that at least two additional factors would be helpful, so the Council may wish to rethink including them. Road testing participants offered mixed views on medium culpability, with one saying they didn’t like how medium culpability is treated, and two others saying that they did (page 4 of Annex B).

Question 3: Does the Council want to add any additional medium culpability factors? Such as ‘some planning’?

3.9 Women against rape and the Centre for Women’s Justice (CWJ) felt there needed to be better recognition of victims of domestic abuse, predominantly women, who are charged with this offence, and that a history of abuse may make their offending less serious. Some of the concerns they raised are more of a charging issue than a sentencing issue, (whether PTCJ should have been charged or wasting police time, the respondents raising questions of racial and gender discrimination.) The CWJ feel that the lower culpability factor of ‘involved through coercion, intimidation or exploitation’ needs to deal more explicitly with the dynamics of domestic abuse. They suggest that a court may look at this factor and think it doesn’t apply in cases where an offender has not been expressly coerced into committing the offence. They suggest adding the words ‘or as a result of domestic abuse’ to this lower culpability factor.

3.10 When used as a mitigating factor the expanded explanation for this factor does reference domestic abuse, but this additional explanation is only present for the mitigating factor, not the culpability factor.

Question 4: Does the Council wish to make any changes as a result of the issues raised about victims of domestic abuse, such as adding the wording suggested to the lower culpability factor?

Witness Intimidation guideline

3.11 Turning now to the culpability factors in the witness intimidation guideline, (Annex D) a small number of respondents commented on the 'breach of bail conditions' high culpability factor. The Chief Magistrate raised a concern that as worded it could result in a disproportionate number of cases falling into culpability A. He asked whether a distinction could be drawn between those cases where the breach of bail is a breach of a condition expressly imposed to prevent an offence of witness intimidation, such as non-contact with named witnesses etc, and those cases where the breach occurs incidentally to the offence. He suggests the former type might fall into culpability A, and the latter into categories other than A. Professor Gillespie and a magistrate also raised similar concerns.

3.12 The Chief Magistrate also suggests that the words 'and/or protective order and/or after Police warning re conduct' should be added, whichever category the factor is placed in. The factor as worded is in the current MCSG guideline and presumably was intended to cover situations where the offender breached specific bail conditions such as not to contact the witness, rather than a breach of any bail condition. So the high culpability factor could be reworded to 'breach of specific bail conditions imposed to prevent witness intimidation'. It is suggested that it is not necessary to have a breach of other bail conditions in medium culpability- it is the breach of the bail conditions specific to the offence that indicate higher culpability.

Question 5: Does the Council wish to reword the bail conditions factor in high culpability in the way suggested? Does the Council wish to add the additional wording suggested by the Chief Magistrate re protective orders/police warnings?

3.13 A number of respondents including the Chief Magistrate were unhappy with the lower culpability factor 'unplanned and/or limited in scope and duration.' The Chief Magistrate said that many such offences are short, but are extremely serious, so are not lower culpability. Two magistrates queried whether the offence could ever truly be 'unplanned' and that the wording should be removed. West London Magistrates Bench suggested instead that it should be reworded to 'contact with witness unplanned and/or limited in scope and duration'.

With respect to the Chief Magistrate there does need to be a lower culpability factor- some incidents could be chance encounters and/or brief incidents, which are not as serious as the types of offence in high culpability. Alternatively, the factor could be reworded with the 'or' removed, so it would only fall into lower culpability if unplanned and limited, so 'contact with witness unplanned and limited in scope and duration'. The rewording suggested may help clarify the factor and resolve some of the concern.

Question 6: Does the Council wish to reword the lower culpability factor in the way suggested?

3.14 Some respondents, including road testing participants (page 9 of Annex B) were concerned with the factors relating to violence or threats of violence. The Chief Magistrate feels that there is a tension regarding the meaning of violence within the guideline, that as worded the high culpability factor of 'actual or threat of violence to witnesses and/or their families' could include a remote, as opposed to in-person threat of violence, and the medium factor of 'non-violent conduct amounting to a threat' can include in-person intimidation, as long as it isn't actual violence. He asks if remote and actual contact should be treated equally? He suggests that instead only actual violence should be in high culpability, followed by threats of violence and threats of non-violence, and perhaps a factor of a threat calculated to have a particularly adverse impact on the victim.

3.15 The Council of HM Circuit Judges were also concerned with the wording of these factors, particularly the medium culpability factor, and suggested that it is instead reworded to 'non-violent conduct amounting to a threat which falls short of violence'. The JC also felt that the distinction between the high and medium culpability factors relating to threats could lead to difficulties for sentencers and asked if the factors could be made clearer. They said that as drafted it is unclear whether an implied threat of violence would be captured within high or medium culpability. West London Magistrates Bench suggested that an additional factor in lower culpability would help to make it clear that there must be no direct or implied threat of violence to the witness or their family for the offence to fall into that category. They propose 'no direct or implied threat of physical violence to the witness or their family' as a new lower culpability factor.

3.16 Taking all these suggestions into account, the factors could be reworded so that in high culpability there is 'actual violence to witnesses and/or their families', in medium culpability there is 'threat of violence towards witnesses and/or their families' and then in lower culpability there is 'no direct or implied threat of physical violence to the witnesses'.

Question 7: Does the Council wish to reword the factors relating to violence /threats in the way suggested?

3.17 HM Council of District Judges also queried this factor but asked whether ‘families’ needed to be extended to friends and associates, saying that as worded it opens the door to arguments about who is a member of a family - e.g, is a girl/boyfriend family? Absent a rationale to restricting the factor to families they think it should be extended to friends and/or associates.

3.18 They also query whether the reference should be to ‘witnesses’ in the plural - for this factor and the other factor in high culpability of ‘deliberately seeking out witnesses’ or should be in the singular - stating that any offences involving multiple witnesses would be charged as multiple offences. West London Magistrates Bench queried whether the reference should be to both a witness/juror, and the Council of HM Circuit Judges made a similar point- saying that perhaps a more neutral term of ‘person’ should be used than ‘witness’. This is because the legislation covers witnesses, potential witnesses, jurors, potential jurors or others who assist in an investigation. Or, ‘witness’ should be used but it should be made clear that this is intended to cover all persons protected by legislation.

Question 8: Does the Council wish to extend the factor to include friends and associates?

Question 9: Should ‘witnesses’ be changed to ‘witness’? Or should the reference be to witness/juror, or ‘person’?

3.19 HM Council of District Judges also suggest that the high culpability factor of ‘deliberately seeking witnesses’ may capture too many cases- that with ‘unplanned’ within lower culpability there does not seem to be a situation between these two possibilities which would fall clearly into medium culpability. Potentially then any confrontation with a witness which is not unplanned is likely to be raised into high culpability. A magistrate also made a similar point and some participants in road testing also raised concerns about the wording of this factor (page 9 of Annex B). To mitigate against this HM Council of District Judges propose a new high culpability factor of ‘offender goes to significant effort and lengths to seek out witness’, with a new medium culpability factor of ‘deliberate effort to find witness falling short of (A)’. As discussed above it is proposed that the lower culpability factor would be revised to ‘contact with witness unplanned and limited in scope and duration’.

Question 10: Does the Council wish to reword the high culpability regarding seeking out the witness, and create a new medium culpability version of this factor?

3.20 Professor Gillespie and West London Magistrates Bench both queried whether the reference to a vulnerable victim should be moved from an aggravating factor to a culpability factor. One road testing participant also stated that they didn't think the vulnerability of the victim was sufficiently emphasised (page 10 of Annex B). Professor Gillespie also queries whether the age of the victim, if it is children or the elderly, should be a relevant factor in assessing culpability. He argues that with a significant disparity in age between the victim and the offender, the offender is deliberately exploiting the victim's vulnerability and arguably using it as an additional threat. There could be a new culpability factor of 'targeting victim on the basis of their vulnerability'.

Question 11: Does the Council wish to move the factor 'vulnerable victim' from step two to become a culpability factor?

3.21 The Magistrates Association (MA) suggest that there should be an additional high culpability factor of 'hire or commission of a group or gang to intimidate witnesses', as they feel this goes beyond deliberately seeking out witnesses or planned nature of conduct. This would add to a fairly substantial list of high culpability factors, so it may be better placed as an aggravating factor, albeit reworded as we no longer use the term 'gang'. There is already an aggravating factor of 'offender involves others in the conduct', perhaps it might be better instead to have the standard aggravating factor of: 'offence was committed as part of a group'.

Question 12: Does the Council wish to add a new high culpability factor as suggested by the MA? Or add the standard 'group' aggravating factor?

4 EQUALITIES

4.1 The consultation asked specific equality and diversity questions-this was also covered during the road testing interviews, this information will be considered at a later meeting.

5 IMPACT AND RISKS

5.1 There have been no risks identified at this time.

Perverting the Course of Justice and Witness Intimidation: road testing summary

Introduction

Perverting the course of justice offences cover a wide range of conduct. Despite being a serious Common Law and indictable-only offence, with a statutory maximum sentence of life imprisonment, no current guideline exists.

Witness intimidation offences include any attempt to threaten or persuade a witness not to give evidence, or to give evidence in a way that is favourable to the defendant. While the Sentencing Guidelines Council (SGC) published Magistrates' Court Sentencing Guidelines (MCSG) in 2008, no current guideline exists for use in Crown Courts.

The Council therefore consulted on (March to June 2022) a new guideline for perverting the course of justice and a revised guideline for witness intimidation.

Methodology

Small-scale qualitative road testing took place in April 2022 to explore if the draft guidelines work as anticipated and to identify any issues. For perverting the course of justice, attention was paid to whether the guideline assists judges to sentence the broad types of behaviour under this offence. For witness intimidation, it was important to understand if the draft guideline reflects the more personal nature of the offence, as well as the broad range of cases covered. For both, sentencing levels are expected to remain consistent after the introduction of the new/ revised guidelines.

As perverting the course of justice is indictable-only and the majority of witness intimidation cases are tried in the Crown Court, interviews were conducted with Crown Court judges only. Fifteen interviews were completed for perverting the course of justice; nine for witness intimidation. Each judge sentenced two scenarios using either the draft guideline for perverting the course of justice or for witness intimidation. Scenarios were based on real cases.

Summary of main points

- The judges felt both guidelines could be applied to the wide range of offending behaviour covered, and they found both guidelines were generally 'clear' and 'easy to interpret'.
- The judges felt both guidelines helped them determine the category of culpability to apply, although there were some conflicting views on the 'medium' category, and while application of culpability across three of the scenarios was largely consistent, it was more mixed in the scenario that was expected to be medium culpability.
- The judges felt both guidelines helped them determine the category of harm to apply, with application of harm largely consistent across the scenarios, with the exception of one scenario that was on the cusp of 2/3, which was reflected in sentencing outcomes.
- There were mixed views on the sentencing tables for perverting the course of justice: while some felt the ranges and starting points were 'about right', others noted a starting point of a community order (CO) 'sends out the wrong message', and asked for clarification on the more serious (A1) offences. There were no particular comments on the sentencing tables for witness intimidation.
- There were mixed views on whether figures for suspended sentence orders (SSO) would be maintained under either guideline, with some judges perceiving these would be unchanged, while others felt levels would shift.

This paper discusses the results of road testing on the draft perverting the course of justice guideline, then the revised witness intimidation guideline. Summary tables for each scenario are presented in Annex A.

Perverting the course of justice

Scenario A

R, aged 22, was a passenger in a car driven by her boyfriend when they were involved in an incident with another car. Her boyfriend had been tailgating the car in front and driving aggressively. The two cars then drew level at traffic lights and her boyfriend got out of the car and shouted abuse towards the occupant of the other car and tried to make him get out of the car to fight. The occupant refused and drove off. The cars drew level again and again R's boyfriend got out of the car and behaved aggressively towards the other driver. The other driver did not engage and drove off. He called the police and told them what happened, giving the licence plate of the car R had been travelling in. The police interviewed R's boyfriend who claimed that he was the victim in the incident, and that it was the other driver who had been abusive and threatening towards him. He said his girlfriend could corroborate his version of events. He then persuaded R to back up his version of events. The police telephoned R who maintained her boyfriend's version of events, saying it was the other driver who was the instigator. The police asked her to come in for an interview to discuss the incident during which she admitted what the correct version of events was, that her boyfriend was the instigator. R was charged with perverting the course of justice. She pleaded guilty at the first opportunity. The court saw medical evidence stating that she suffers from depression. She has no previous convictions and is in her final year of university. She was very remorseful. (Her boyfriend was also charged with the same offence.)

This was expected to be medium culpability (C), medium harm (2) case, bordering C3. C2 starting point is nine months, range six months to one years' custody. There are no aggravating factors; there are a number of mitigating factors; and a guilty plea. The sentence could therefore reduce to a six-month suspended sentence order (SSO). Key findings are below; the summary table can be found in Annex A, Table 1.

Key findings

- Fourteen judges sentenced this as culpability C, citing factors such as it being unplanned, unsophisticated, and the underlying offence was not serious; one as B<sup>1</sup>.
- As anticipated, there was some disagreement about the level of harm: three judges sentenced this as 2 (citing there was suspicion cast on an innocent party, some distress caused to an innocent party, or some delay to the course of justice), four were borderline 2/3, and eight stated 3 (all cited 'limited effects of the offence').
- Accordingly, there were a range of starting points: the three judges selecting harm level 2 all chose nine months' custody; three of the judges selecting 2/3 gave COs (one explicitly stated six months, the others did not) while the fourth would impose a conditional discharge<sup>2</sup>; and of the eight who chose level 3 harm, one chose a CO of six months, five chose higher level COs (HLCOs), and two chose custodial sentences (one of six months, one of nine months).
- All 14 of the judges who completed the exercise agreed there were no aggravating factors.

<sup>1</sup> The judge noted that it wasn't unplanned but also did not involve coercion, intimidation or exploitation so chose B.

<sup>2</sup> The judge felt a case of this kind 'should not be tried in the Crown Court' and would therefore impose a conditional discharge; they did not therefore complete the rest of the sentencing exercise for this scenario.

- The majority of the judges completing the exercise noted mitigating factors such as: no previous convictions, remorse, and mental disorder (some noted they would require further evidence). Other factors mentioned were: 'final year at university' with one noting the possible 'consequence of a sentence', another 'thus she's got every prospect' and another 'potential good career', as well as 'coercion' or 'under pressure'.
- A range of pre-guilty plea final sentences were given<sup>3</sup>: two of those selecting harm level 2 gave six month custodial sentences, one nine months; the three selecting 2/3<sup>4</sup> all gave COs (with one explicitly stating six months); and a more mixed picture emerged for the eight who chose 3 – one would defer sentencing for six months, one stated it would be 'the bottom of the range [in the table]', two would give HLCOs, with one additionally specifying 240 hours of unpaid work and 15 rehabilitation activity requirement (RAR) days, one would suspend the sentence, one would give nine months custody, and two did not give pre-guilty plea sentences.
- The 14 judges completing the exercise all amended their sentences in light of the guilty plea: eight gave various levels of CO (CO through to HLCO) with attachments such as unpaid work and RAR, and six judges gave SSOs.
- When asked for their views of the final sentence, those who gave COs were generally 'pleased' or 'happy' with their sentences, with one noting 'the expectation is custody and at the very least a SSO... ordinarily I would not have considered to justify for a CO, although that is exactly the right disposal in this case' and another noting they 'cannot ever remember imposing a CO for an offence of this nature... this is giving a judge... some flexibility'. Those who gave SSOs were also generally content: one noted they were 'very comfortable with it', another that it 'may appear lenient but... she has lost her good character – serious impact', another that 'she can get her life back on track with a suspended sentence', one wondered 'could I have brought it down to HLCO?', while another noted a 'HLCO would be too low' and another noted 'I'm not very happy about a non-custodial sentence for this sort of crime... I take the view it should be marked by a prison sentence'

Scenario B

W, worked as a police officer investigating the supply of class A drugs and was trusted to do undercover work. He falsely accused another police officer, who was also his romantic partner, of drug use and class A drug dealing. Over a period of months, he made phone calls to other police officers and agencies asserting this allegation, and also involved his brother to act out certain roles to assist in the conspiracy to make the allegations more believable. He also planted drugs within her possessions, for the investigating officers to find. His partner was arrested and spent several hours in custody following her arrest, and then had to wait 6 weeks while the case was investigated. After 6 weeks she was told no further action would be taken, as W's allegations were proved to be false. The court was told that there would be considerable further work for the authorities due to appeals against conviction from cases which he had had involvement in. He was found guilty after a trial. He is aged 30. It seemed the reason he had committed the offence was because he was jealous of her success at work and of her being around male colleagues.

This was expected to be a high culpability (A), high harm (1) case: starting point four years, with a range of two to seven years' custody. There is an aggravating factor of involving others, and mitigation of previous good character, however it is such a serious offence the sentence is likely to be at the top of the range (seven years). Key findings are summarised below, followed by a summary of comments from using the guideline across both scenarios and through further questions. Table 2 is in Annex A.

Key findings

- All 15 judges agreed this was culpability A, citing factors such as it was sophisticated and/ or planned, over a sustained period of time, and the underlying offence was very serious.
- Fourteen judges agreed this was harm 1, mainly citing there were serious consequences for an innocent party, and a serious impact on the administration of justice; one judge selected level 2 stating there was suspicion cast upon, and some distress caused, to an innocent party.
- The majority of judges chose a starting point of four years; of those who did not, one noted the 'quantity of drugs could make a difference to the starting point' and therefore raised the starting point from four to six years, another stated eight years (but did not specify why), while a third had chosen A2, and chose the corresponding starting point of two years.
- Eleven judges selected aggravating factors such as the offender involved others (six judges), evidence concealed/ destroyed (two judges), as well as listing other factors not specified in the guideline such as 'in a position of trust' or 'abuse/ misuse of that position'.
- Eight judges said there were no mitigating factors, while the remaining seven noted no previous convictions or previous good character.
- There were a range of final sentences given, from three years and three months, through to seven years, with most sentences (12) falling between five to seven years.
- When asked for their views of the final sentence, there were a range of views. The three judges who gave lower sentences (between three years and three months to three years and eight months) thought their sentences were 'ok', they had given a 'reasonably substantial discount for good character [and] it didn't seem out of kilter', with those giving sentences between five and six years also generally appearing content with their sentences, noting it 'needs a significant sentence for a police officer to conduct themselves like that' and 'it's proportionate [to] the serious nature of the offence [and] I may have been tempted to go higher', and 'very comfortable with it' and three between six and seven years noting that 'there was no aggravating feature in terms of position of public duty/trust – I had to put it in to explain why I upped it to 6 years' and 'the range is not big enough for these top level crimes' and 'it's a bit higher than I first thought... but the more you look at it... it's hard to actually think of a more serious example'.

Comments on the guideline

The following summarises a small number of comments made using the guideline across both scenarios, with the majority coming from follow-up questions:

- All of the judges felt the guideline could be applied to the wide range of offending behaviour covered by this offence, noting 'it has broadened the way I can approach sentencing offences of this sort... this is much fairer' and 'the guideline covers a large range of activity and sentences'. However, a couple of judges also noted 'it's important to give judges leeway' and '[I] imagine most of the factors identified will cover most cases, but there are going to be cases where judges may struggle to fit it in and have to use their own discretion'.
- All of the judges felt the guideline was clear and easy to interpret.
- All of the judges felt the guideline helped them determine the category of culpability to apply, although there were conflicting views on 'medium', with one judge noting 'I don't like how medium culpability it treated in this guideline (and others)... category B seems to be quite large', while two noted they 'quite agree that medium has to be whatever isn't in A and C' and 'it is quite well established now and works quite well... if you try and put too many things in medium, people get confused'. One also noted, under high culpability, 'what counts as sustained? Better to have the quantity of activity'.

- The majority of the judges felt the guideline helped them determine the category of harm to apply, however, some did raise some thoughts: one noted there's 'nothing really about... cost to the police and impact on police in terms of time spent in man hours and costs and expert costs in investigating the false narrative'; one that 'when we have words like 'some' rather than serious or significant in Harm 2, there is always argument from counsel about whether this falls into 1 or 2... [could] some guidance... be included – what is some or serious distress – like in the death by dangerous or manslaughter guidelines?'; another that 'you could put "some" in front of suspicion in the first bullet... and on point four... add "serious or substantial"'; and one that 'I don't particularly like the expression "limited effects of the offence"'.
particularity like the expression "limited effects of the offence".
- There were a variety of comments about the starting points and ranges. The majority thought they were 'about right', noting these were 'pretty much in the expected range', 'the law of the diagonal... makes sense... balancing culpability and harm', 'there are overlaps [which] gives judges the flexibility', that 'it's particularly important that there is scope to pass the custody threshold, even in C3 – to suggest [this offence] could never pass the custody threshold would send out the wrong message', while one was 'surprised it's four years as a starting point in A1, a range of up to 7 is about right'. However, six judges noted some concerns: three commented about the top of the range, asking for 'extra guidance on cases above A1', '[there is a] danger when you have a range of CO to 7 years that some sentencers may feel 7 years is the top end... when it is not' with one noting that 'it might be useful to remind that you can go outside of the range – like you do in other guidelines'; two noted that a 'starting point of a CO... sends out the wrong message/ is inappropriate for this perverting the course of justice; and one that they would like 'more of an overlap between the ranges in C3 and B3, so the top of the range should be nine months in C3'.
- In terms of the factors increasing seriousness, five judges had no suggestions for change, with two stating that they were 'fairly standard' and 'cover everything', and two that it's 'better to keep it short and simple because these cases are very different' and 'keep them general [and] short, don't be over prescriptive'. The remaining six did provide some suggestions: three felt that 'being in a position of trust' should be included; one noted 'should it be concealed, destroyed or planted?' while another wondered whether it should be 'an aggravating feature or harm'; one thought influence of alcohol or drugs 'doesn't sit very well... more relates to violence', while another thought it 'could... be a mitigating factor... stupid thing to do and wouldn't have done it had they been sober' (although they noted it 'can be dealt with on a case-by-case basis'). One noted a 'risk of double counting' between offender involves others in the conduct in aggravating and assessment of harm.
- On the factors reducing seriousness, 12 judges had no suggestions for change, with two noting they were 'fairly standard', and one that they 'cover everything'; one judge queried 'when you've got no previous convictions and then good character and/ or exemplary conduct, do you mean over and above not having previous convictions? Slightly confusing because no previous convictions would mean someone of good character – exemplary conduct is a description of what you're talking about in the sense that they got things in their like marked out as otherwise being a good, upstanding citizen', and two suggested related factors: 'being subjected to pressure to commit the offence depending on their social circumstance', and 'if you want to consider some kind of impact of a cultural/ religious situation, it may be something that would reduce seriousness/ reflect in personal mitigation, but it may be that it increases seriousness, not decreases.... If something was put in, it needs to be sufficiently broad [and refer the sentencer] to the Equal Treatment Bench Book'.

- Judges also provided general comments on the guideline, such as: 'I liked it because it broadened the range, which is absolutely right... [previously], we felt under pressure that it had to be seen to be prison... this will hopefully change that dynamic'; several commented positively on the clear, familiar, standard format of the guidelines, for example 'they mirror the format of our existing guidelines... before guidelines were introduced, there was no consistency in sentencing'; 'good to see a guideline on this, beyond case law... judges do struggle sometimes with this type of offence'.
- There were mixed views on whether figures for SSO would be maintained<sup>5</sup> under the revised guideline: six judges felt levels wouldn't change, noting they will 'be about the same... the guideline will... make it easier to produce the sort of results that we're already producing', with one stating the 'draft guideline, unless it's a very minor offence, steers towards immediate custody... could find you've got more prison sentences' but then said 'for those below the two year custody, judges are under a duty to consider suspending it [and] it probably does allow for that in the lower categories'; one judge noted they didn't know, 'but... the guideline will help is consider cases more seriously (and rightly so), so we might get better charging decisions'; the remaining eight judges gave more nuanced responses: one thought figures would stay the 'same for immediate custody but... the non-custodial will get split between suspended sentences and other disposals', one thought there could be an increase in non-custodial sentences, with more COs in particular, two judges agreed there could be more COs, two thought there could be an increase in non-custodial sentences/decrease in immediate custody, and two thought there might be an increase in immediate custody. When looking at the results from the first scenario, which tested this, eight of the judges completing the exercise gave various forms of CO, and six gave SSOs.
- The judges were asked to consider two questions relating to equality and diversity. When prompted to think about whether there were 'any particular words in the guideline that may contribute to disparities in sentencing', the majority did not think there were any, but some provided thoughts, such as: 'it is important to emphasise being able to speak to a defendant in clear unambiguous language that they understand'; '[there] maybe cultural considerations - a lot of types of family issues that may affect people particularly, for example Muslim people - see pressures that come up on them from the mosque, from the imams telling them that Allah will not forgive them if they don't side with their family and things...'; 'where medium culpability is defined as neither high or low, this might increase discretion and potential disparities'; and, 'looking at mitigation... the phrase offender was in a lesser or subordinate role... it goes far enough to deal with people who are under pressure... I think pressure goes beyond limited role – limited role in drugs might put somebody in the lowest category of culpability, but being subject to pressure goes beyond that... it is particularly an issue that arises in drugs where you've got young offenders subject to pressure from their peers... and a related issue for young black men in inner city areas. I think there's probably some space for something else in mitigation to reflect that'. When asked whether they thought the guideline 'gives enough guidance on how to deal with specific equality and diversity issues', the judges generally felt it did, noting they have training on it and that the guidance refers them to the Equal Treatment Bench Book (ETBB; one noted adding 'inclusivity, or equality and diversity' in the box that refers to ETBB). However, four judges did offer some suggestions, including whether guidelines could 'cite parts of ETBB in particular guidelines', 'make reference to the ETBB as a step in every guideline... [to] force judges to look at it in a more proactive way... and if there are factors from ETBB relevant to a case, to identify them', noting that 'the practical bits are very useful and could be highlighted, such as in the format of a compendium sidebar or dropdown menus such as in the Judicial College Trial Compendium', and that 'diversity issues are a much broader topic... a judge has to be much more alive to it... it is a matter we need to have more education about, probably through Judicial College', but in terms of guidelines, 'I'm not sure how you would do it'.

<sup>5</sup> It is anticipated that sentencing levels will remain consistent with levels before the new guideline is introduced. To test this, judges were informed that in 2020, about 400 offenders were sentenced to this type of offence, of which 51% received immediate custody and 42% a SSO. They were then asked what their views were regarding future volumes of immediate custody and SSOs, and whether they thought these figures will be maintained under the draft guideline or not.

Witness intimidation

Scenario A

The victim lived next door to the offender, C aged 50, and there had been a previous incident of anti-social behaviour involving the offender which she had reported to the police. The offender whilst drunk went to her back door, shouting and swearing and generally being abusive. He threatened her and said, 'I know it's you who called the police on me before. If you know what's good for you, you'll drop the case, or else'. This terrified the victim, who felt too scared to leave her house or go into her back garden in case she met the offender. She did however go ahead with giving evidence. The offender pleaded guilty at the first opportunity. The court heard that the offender had a long-standing drink problem but in recent months had gone to his GP to seek help for it and had been sober for a number of months, attending AA meetings. He had also moved away from the area to live with his daughter in an attempt to turn his life around.

This was expected to be a medium culpability (B), high harm (1): starting point one year, range of nine months to two years' custody. There is an aggravating factor of commission of offence while under the influence of alcohol or drugs; a mitigating factor of determination and demonstration of steps taken to address addiction or offending behaviour; and a guilty plea. The final sentence could be eight months' custody, which could be suspended. Key findings are below; Table 3 is in Annex A.

Key findings

- Five judges chose culpability A (citing deliberately seeking out witnesses), three chose B (citing non-violent conduct or a factor from A and from C and therefore it would be B), and one was between B and C, noting 'there was a threat of violence but it was spontaneous and in drink'.
- Seven judges chose harm 1 (citing contact made at the victim's home), one was between 1 and 2 (noting while there was serious distress, there was no impact on the administration of justice), and one chose 2, noting 'it was in the vicinity of the home, but that's because they are neighbours anyway'.
- There were a range of starting points from nine months (one participant), ten months (one participant), one year (two participants) through to two years (four participants)<sup>6</sup>.
- Eight judges noted the aggravating factor under the influence of alcohol with one also adding 'previous anti-social behaviour'; one did not state any factors.
- Eight judges noted mitigating factors such as steps taken to address addiction (seven respondents) and remorse (four), with only one stating there were none.

- Pre-guilty plea final sentences ranged from a nine-month SSO, through to a custodial sentence of one year and eight months, with the majority agreeing it would be a sentence between one year and one year and eight months<sup>7</sup>.
- For the final sentences after GP, one judge selected a six-month CO, three chose to suspend sentences (which were for six months, ten months and one year and two months), and five gave custodial sentences ranging from 28-30 weeks to one year.
- The judges were asked their views of the final sentence: the judge who gave a CO stated 'It's below the custody threshold'; the three who gave SSOs noted these were 'about right', or the 'same as would have passed without the guideline'; while the five who gave custodial sentences expressed views such as 'the most important question would be whether to suspend it or not', and 'it is so serious to interfere with the course of justice... a suspended sentence or community order... [doesn't] reflect how important it is'.

Scenario B

The victim was due to give evidence against her partner B for a s.20 GBH offence. He had been remanded in custody ahead of the trial. He recently had a previous conviction for turning up at her workplace with a knife. Ahead of the trial B arranged for his cellmate who had recently been released from prison to go to her home and put a letter through the door (while she was at home). The letter warned her not to turn up at court for the trial. He threatened to slash her face, burn her house down, burn her family and friend's houses down, and stab her, and that he was willing to 'do life' for her. Due to his past behaviour the victim believed the threats to be very real. However, she reported this to the police and gave evidence at court. B, aged 35, pleaded guilty on the day of the trial. During the case the judge observed that a year on from the events the victim remained terrified.

This was expected to be a high culpability (A), high harm (1) case: starting point two years, range of one to four years' custody. There are aggravating factors of a recent relevant previous conviction and involving others in the conduct, no mitigating factors, and a small credit for a guilty plea on the day of the trial. The sentence could move up to three years' custody. Key findings are presented below, followed by a summary of comments from using the guideline across both scenarios and further questioning. Table 4 is in Annex A.

Key findings

- All nine judges agreed it was culpability A, citing threats of violence, seeking out witnesses, and sophisticated and/ or planned.
- All nine judges agreed it was harm 1, citing contact made at the victims' home and serious distress caused.
- The judges selected a range of starting points, from one year and eight months (one participant, noting it would 'perhaps be slightly below the starting point'), through to four years (one participant who stated 'there are a number of factors under culpability... I would increase from the starting point of two years'). Within that range, one judge stated two to four years, another three years (stating that 'I think I go right to the top of the category and might even go above, but as the statutory maximum is only five years' custody and this isn't actual violence, it can't be in the very top 20 per cent of offences'), and five selected two years.

- Eight judges noted the aggravating factor of previous convictions, with four also noting offence committed on bail, four that the offender involved others, and three also mentioning domestic abuse/ violence.
- Six judges said there were no mitigating factors, while three did note the guilty plea.
- A range of pre-guilty plea sentences were given, from two years four months to 'outside of the top of the range'<sup>8</sup>.
- The six judges who gave specific pre-guilty plea sentences all took into consideration the late guilty plea, and reduced their sentence to give a range of final sentences: three explicitly noted a ten per cent reduction, while others adjusted their sentences down (for example, from three years down to two years and eight months). There was a range of final sentences from one year and six months through to an extended sentence, with the majority (six) between two to three years.
- Of those providing their views of their final sentences, two noted it was 'about right' or they were 'happy with the sentence', and two felt 'easier about imposing a very severe sentence because it's... acknowledged by the guideline' or 'the guideline gave me more confidence to go higher than I would have done'.

Comments on the guideline

The following summarises comments made using the guideline across both scenarios and through follow-up questions:

- All of the judges felt the guideline could be applied to the wide range of offending behaviour covered by this offence, commenting that they 'are good and work well', 'they cover all the scenes', although one did note that 'the one thing I think isn't really set out in the guidelines is the index offence... the offence that leads to the witness intimidation'.
- All of the judges felt the guideline was clear and easy to interpret.
- All of the judges felt the guideline helped them determine which category of culpability to apply, although some did provide comments: one noted 'I wonder if it's possible to further differentiate "deliberately seeking out the witness" between medium and high culpability', another whether the 'differentiation between A, B and C could be improved', and that they 'understand.. that it's difficult to put medium culpability into words that allow for sufficient judicial discretion... you could roll these out... and maybe keep an eye on medium culpability to think whether there's different wording', and one noted that they were 'not clear [about] the distinction between an actual or threat of violence... as well as non-violent conduct amounting to a threat... should it read "actual threatening violence"?'.
- All of the judges felt the guideline helped them determine which category of harm to apply, although one commented that they were not sure 'how being by the victim's home is enough to put a case into category 1'.
- The majority of judges did not have any particular comments on the starting points and ranges in the sentencing tables, noting, for example, 'it's important and right that at the bottom of every category... custody is a potential', 'sentencing ranges are appropriate', 'I'm glad it goes up to four years... I always wonder why it doesn't go up to give years or whatever the maximum is, but judges know you can go above the category range if you need to' although one did query whether the starting point of two years in A1 is 'too low'.
- Five judges had no further comments on the factors increasing seriousness, while four did raise suggestions: 'not sure whether the use of social media is an aggravating factor?', 'should offence committed while on remand be included?’, ‘I would probably add a specific reference to domestic violence’, and ‘I would add ongoing effect on victim, also in the longer term’.

- There were no comments on the factors reducing seriousness.
- There were two comments on the guideline as a whole: one noted ‘I’m not quite sure that the vulnerability of the victim is sufficiently emphasised’, while another that ‘The Council ought to think whether or not totality really has a part to play in witness intimidation’ noting ‘let’s say the witness intimidation will get you three years, and the offence would get you three years, if a judge starts sating well, because of totality, I’m going to reduce that to four and a half or five years, it puts a bit of a premium on interfering with witnesses... if you undermine justice by stopping people giving evidence, it seems a bit paradoxical’.
- Four judges thought that figures for SSO will be maintained<sup>9</sup> under the revised guideline, while four thought there may be less SSO’s as there will be ‘less in “suspendable” territory’ and ‘immediate custodial sentences might increase’, while one thought ‘in category A case[s] those would all end up being immediate sentence... but B and C would get us a suspended sentence, so it would depend on... what percentage ends up being category A’.
- The judges were then asked to consider two questions relating to equality and diversity. When prompted to think about whether there were ‘any particular words in the guideline that may contribute to disparities in sentencing’, the majority did not think there were any, but some provided thoughts, such as: ‘descriptions of the level of distress are always quite difficult – difficult to discern between some and serious’ and another that “some” and “serious” descriptions of harm may lead to disparity – some victims may be more able and articulate than others’; and one noted ‘when we come to impose sentence, we have to look at whether there is a realistic prospect of rehabilitation... somebody who’s middle class, got a job, got family support, has gone to their GP and done all of the things that demonstrate they’re capable of rehabilitation is far more likely to get a suspended sentence... someone who is homeless, or has no family support, isn’t going to have that same evidence to convince us that sentence can be suspended’. When asked whether they thought the guideline ‘gives enough guidance on how to deal with specific equality and diversity issues’, some judges thought it did, with a couple referring to the ETBB, noting that was ‘enough’ or that ‘it is good on mental health and learning disabilities’. Others had more specific thoughts, such as: ‘nothing on racial/ religious issues? Possibly not able to do so?’; another that ‘there may need to be a separate guideline and overarching guideline for [equality and diversity]’, although another noted ‘we’ve got so many overarching guidelines... many times it’s not clear which one(s) to use in particular... could be useful to state, at Step 3, to consider any other specific guidelines?’.

<sup>9</sup> It is anticipated that sentencing levels will remain consistent with levels before the new guideline is introduced. To test this, judges were informed that in 2020, about 180 offenders were sentenced to this type of offence, of which 63% received an immediate custody and 26% an SSO. They were then asked what their views were regarding future volumes of immediate custody and SSO, and whether they thought these figures will be maintained under the draft guideline or not.

STEP ONE

Determining the offence category

The court should determine the offence category with reference only to the factors in the table below. In order to determine the category the court should assess culpability and harm.

The level of culpability is determined by weighing up all the factors of the case. Where there are characteristics present which fall under different levels of culpability the court should balance these characteristics to reach a fair assessment of the offender's culpability.

CULPABILITY
Demonstrated by one or more of the following:
A- High Culpability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Conduct over a sustained period of time</li><li>• Sophisticated and/or planned nature of conduct</li><li>• Underlying offence very serious</li></ul>
B- Medium culpability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Other cases that fall between categories A and C because:<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>○ Factors are present in A and C which balance each other out and/or</li><li>○ The offender's culpability falls between the factors described in A and C</li></ul></li></ul>
C- Lower culpability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Unplanned and/or limited in scope and duration</li><li>• Unsophisticated nature of conduct</li><li>• Underlying offence was not serious</li><li>• Involved through coercion, intimidation or exploitation</li><li>• Offender's responsibility substantially reduced by mental disorder or learning disability</li></ul>

The level of harm is assessed by weighing up all the factors in the case.
Category 1	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Serious consequences for an innocent party(ies) as a result of the offence (for example time spent in custody/arrest)</li><li>• Serious distress caused to innocent party (for example loss of reputation)</li><li>• Serious impact on administration of justice</li><li>• Substantial delay caused to the course of justice</li></ul>
Category 2	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Suspicion cast upon an innocent party as a result of the offence</li><li>• Some distress caused to innocent party</li><li>• Some impact on administration of justice</li><li>• Some delay caused to the course of justice</li></ul>
Category 3	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Limited effects of the offence</li></ul>

STEP TWO

Starting point and category range

Having determined the category at step one, the court should use the corresponding starting point to reach a sentence within the category range below. The starting point applies to all offenders irrespective of plea or previous convictions

Harm	Culpability
	A	B	C
Category 1	Starting Point 4 years' custody Category Range 2 - 7 years' custody	Starting Point 2 years' custody Category Range 1 -4 years' custody	Starting Point 1 years' custody Category Range 9 months - 2 years' custody

Below is a non-exhaustive list of additional elements providing the context of the offence and factors relating to the offender. Identify whether a combination of these or other relevant factors should result in any upward or downward adjustment from the sentence arrived at so far.

Factors increasing seriousness

Statutory aggravating factors:

- Previous convictions, having regard to a) the nature of the offence to which the conviction relates and its relevance to the current offence; and b) the time that has elapsed since the conviction
- Offence committed whilst on bail

Other aggravating factors:

- Offender involves others in the conduct
- Vulnerable victim
- Commission of offence whilst under the influence of alcohol or drugs

- Evidence concealed/destroyed
- Offence committed on licence or post sentence supervision or while subject to court order(s)

Factors reducing seriousness or reflecting personal mitigation

- No previous convictions or no relevant/recent convictions
- Remorse
- Good character and/or exemplary conduct
- The offender was in a lesser or subordinate role if acting with others/performed limited role under direction
- Determination, and/or demonstration of steps taken to address addiction or offending behaviour
- Physical disability or serious medical conditions requiring urgent, intensive or long-term treatment
- Mental disorder, learning disability (where not taken into account at step one)
- Age and/or lack of maturity
- Sole or primary carer for dependent relatives

STEP THREE

Consider any factors which indicate a reduction for assistance to the prosecution

The court should take into account section 74 of the Sentencing Code (reduction in sentence for assistance to prosecution) and any other rule of law by virtue of which an offender may receive a discounted sentence in consequence of assistance given (or offered) to the prosecutor or investigator.

STEP FOUR

Reduction for guilty pleas

The court should take account of any potential reduction for a guilty plea in accordance with section 73 of the Sentencing Code and the Reduction in Sentence for a Guilty Plea guideline.

STEP FIVE

Totality principle

If sentencing an offender for more than one offence, or where the offender is already serving a sentence, consider whether the total sentence is just and proportionate to the overall offending behaviour in accordance with the Totality guideline.

STEP SIX

Compensation and ancillary orders

In all cases, the court should consider whether to make compensation and/or other ancillary orders. Where the offence has resulted in personal injury, loss or damage the court must give reasons if it decides not to order compensation (Sentencing Code, s.55).

- Ancillary orders – Magistrates' Court
- Ancillary orders – Crown Court Compendium

STEP SEVEN*Reasons

Section 52 of the Sentencing Code imposes a duty to give reasons for, and explain the effect of, the sentence.

STEP EIGHT*Consideration for time spent on bail

The court must consider whether to give credit for time spent on bail in accordance with section 240A of the Criminal Justice Act 2003 and section 52 of the Sentencing Code

Witness Intimidation

Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994, s.51(1) and s.51(2)

Triable either way

Maximum: 5 years' custody

Offence range: Community Order- 4 years' custody

STEP ONE

Determining the offence category

The court should determine the offence category with reference only to the factors in the table below. In order to determine the category the court should assess culpability and harm.

The level of culpability is determined by weighing up all the factors of the case. Where there are characteristics present which fall under different levels of culpability the court should balance these characteristics to reach a fair assessment of the offender's culpability.

CULPABILITY
Demonstrated by one or more of the following:
A- High Culpability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Actual or threat of violence to witnesses and/or their families</li><li>• Deliberately seeking out witnesses</li><li>• Breach of bail conditions</li><li>• Conduct over a sustained period of time</li><li>• Sophisticated and/or planned nature of conduct</li></ul>
B- Medium culpability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Non-violent conduct amounting to a threat</li><li>• Other cases that fall between categories A and C because:<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>○ Factors are present in A and C which balance each other out and/or</li><li>○ The offender's culpability falls between the factors described in A and C</li></ul></li></ul>
C- Lower culpability	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Unplanned and/or limited in scope and duration</li><li>• Involved through coercion, intimidation or exploitation</li><li>• Offender's responsibility substantially reduced by mental disorder or learning disability</li></ul>
HARM
The level of harm is assessed by weighing up all the factors in the case.
Category 1	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Contact made at or in vicinity of victim's home</li><li>• Serious distress caused to victim</li><li>• Serious impact on administration of justice</li></ul>
Category 2	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Some distress caused to the victim</li><li>• Some impact on administration of justice</li></ul>
Category 3	<ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• Limited effects of the offence</li></ul>

STEP TWO

Starting point and category range

Having determined the category at step one, the court should use the corresponding starting point to reach a sentence within the category range below. The starting point applies to all offenders irrespective of plea or previous convictions

Harm	Culpability
	A	B	C
Category 1	Starting Point 2 years' custody Category Range 1 -4 years' custody	Starting Point 1 years' custody Category Range 9 months-2 years' custody	Starting Point 9 months' custody Category Range 6 months - 1 years' custody
Category 2	Starting Point 1 years' custody Category Range 9 months -2 years' custody	Starting Point 9 months' custody Category Range 6 months - 1 years' custody	Starting Point 6 months custody Category Range High level community order - 9 months' custody
Category 3	Starting Point 9 months' custody Category Range 6 months -1 years' custody	Starting Point 6 months custody Category Range High level community order – 9 months' custody	Starting Point Medium level community order Category Range Low level community order – 6 months custody
